The benefits of our Helping Hands Network program

"Play is a biological imperative for healthy child development."

It fosters brain growth, the development of motor skills, and executive functions. Play plays a pivotal role in emotional regulation, problem-solving, and navigating complex social interactions. Through play, children acquire essential skills that contribute to identity, confidence, resilience, and overall well-being.

Our research-led and purpose-designed Adventure Program

The JAG Adventure Program, which is offered through Helping Hands Network, is the first purpose-designed play-based program in the Outside School Hours Care sector. It allows us to play a key role in furthering child development, supporting them to become healthy, confident and resilient individuals.

Through collaboration with industry experts, the capability of our team, and the environment we provide in services, we enable the delivery of expert play-based experiences and activities for children at your school.

Making new friends

When a little human meets another little human, new bonds are formed that make their transition to big school so much easier - it's all about familiar faces and a sense of belonging

Building lifelong skills

New experiences and shared challenges build confidence and resilience - fundamental to how little humans look at the world, socialise and learn

Caring Educators

Having caring and nurturing grownups around you means all the difference - our educators make sure our little humans are encouraged to flourish and have fun, every step of the way

Having fun

We know fun plays a huge factor in positive learning and development. Our programs are designed with the child's needs and voice at the forefront
